Who Should Apply:

We encourage USC and non-USC applications from scholars (tenure and research track faculty) in the early stages of their research career from academic and research institutions and who are interested in conducting research on the health and economic wellbeing of minority elder populations. This cycle we are looking for pilots with a special interest in cognitive decline and/or Alzheimer's disease and related dementias. New investigators who are under-represented in their field of work are encouraged to apply. Three early career investigators called 'RCMAR Scientists' will be selected based on:

- Quality of proposed research
- Credentials of investigator
- Investigators that have been funded by other RCMAR centers are discouraged to apply
- Relatedness of proposed research to the USC-AD RCMAR mission (see information below on the mission of the USC- AD RCMAR)
- Likelihood that proposed research would lead to subsequent National Institute on Aging (NIA) funded projects.
- NIH FCOI (USC applicants) and diSClose (USC applicants) certified
- USC applicants must also complete their Grants Management Training

Application Process:

(1) By COB Friday, February 25, 2022, applicants should submit a 1-page Letter of Intent (LoI) and current CV that includes:

- Name, email address, home address, faculty reference(s), and telephone number
- Other Support Form
- Descriptive title of proposed pilot study
- Overall goal of pilot
- Specific aims
- Study design
- Data collection or source (indicate if primary or secondary data collection)
- Name(s), title(s), ORCID number, contact information of potential mentor(s)
- Statement indicating
  - (1) Availability to participate in monthly lunch 1-hour Scholar meetings and tri-annual all-day retreats located in the Greater Los Angeles area
  - (2) Availability to communicate regularly with appointed mentors

(a) By COB Friday, February 25, 2022, submit this 1-page LoI and your CV to:

About USC-RCMAR:

The Minority Aging Health Economics Research Center at USC was established through funding from the National Institutes of Health and aims to increase the number, diversity and academic success of junior faculty focusing their research on the health and economic wellbeing of minority elderly populations. It is part of a network of NIH-funded Resource Centers for Minority Aging Research (RCMAR). The mission of the USC RCMAR, the Minority Aging Health Economics Research Center, is to provide infrastructure and resources to increase the number and diversity of early stage investigators conducting research in aging and cognitive health and to support their academic success.

The Executive Committee includes: Jennifer Ailshire, Assistant Professor of Gerontology and Sociology; Maria Aranda, Associate Professor of Social Work; Helena Chui, Chair and Professor of Neurology; Eileen Crimmins, AARP Chair in Gerontology; Dana Goldman, Dean Public Policy School and Co-Director of RCMAR; Julie Zissimopoulos, Associate Professor and Co-Director of RCMAR
